Question

What can I do now?

Answers:

- 1) Record your certificate with IRCA
- 2) Become a registered IRCA auditor

1 Record your certificate

Now you have completed the IRCA course, you should record your training course completion certificate with IRCA. This does not cost you anything but allows you to:

- access the latest news in IRCA's newsletter – Inform
- network with fellow auditors in IRCA's private LinkedIn group
- keep your skills up-to-date with exclusive access to IRCA's reports, research and analysis
- get advance notice of ISO standard changes and how they impact auditors
- get notified about discounts on IRCA fees
- record your achievement with IRCA

All you need to do is enter your details at:

www.irca.org/certificate

2 Become a registered IRCA auditor

The next step beyond recording your certificate is to become a registered auditor with IRCA. Over 10,000 auditors have chosen IRCA registration because it:

- is an easy way to let employers differentiate you from less qualified auditors
- shows you have business expertise in addition to auditing expertise
- allows you to list yourself on the IRCA register, which is the first stop for organisations looking for qualified auditors
- connects you to a network of 10,000 contacts
- helps you to work internationally with a globally recognised qualification
- supports your career development.
